LESSON 3

Pre-Game Huddle: Your Focus for Lesson 3

Welcome to the architecture phase. In Lesson 2, you did the deep work of discovery and gathered the essential "raw materials" of your Inner Blueprint. Now, you will use those powerful insights to construct the single most important tool for your leadership journey: your M.V.P. Blueprint.

This is where your purpose gets a roadmap. But it's more than a personal map; it's an alignment tool that clarifies how you show up as a leader and builds a foundation of trust with your Player-Coach and your team. This lesson is challenging, but it is also where your vision starts to become real.

Choose progress over perfection. The goal is to get a powerful first draft down; you can, and should, refine it over time.

Primary A.R.A.W. Focus:

Alignment

Architecting a clear M.V.P. Blueprint that aligns your purpose, vision, and daily actions with the needs of your team and organization.

Agility

Creating a game plan that is both focused and flexible enough to adapt to real-world changes.

Your Objectives for this Lesson:

- Draft a compelling Purpose Statement (Your "Why").
- Draft a vivid Vision Statement (Your "Where").
- Draft an action-oriented Mission Statement (Your "How").
- Understand how your M.V.P. Blueprint creates clarity and sets expectations with your Player-Coach.
- Understand how your M.V.P. Blueprint serves as the foundation for setting A.R.A.W.-focused goals in the 90-Day Way Scorecard.

Architect Your Purpose Statement (Your “Why”)

- Purpose isn’t a statement. It’s a leadership anchor and a decision filter.
- Your purpose is the authentic engine behind why you are here. It’s not about feeling good; it’s about realizing the original intention for your life and leadership that fuels forward motion when things get hard. It’s the reason people trust you, follow you, and stay with you in high-stakes moments.

Common Misunderstanding of Purpose → Athleadership Shift

Most People Think...		Athleaders Know...
“It’s static and poetic.”	→	“It’s functional and active. It evolves.”
“It’s about what I love.”	→	“It’s about what I refuse to ignore.”

Draft it using your Lesson 2 notes. It only has to be true, so don’t wait for perfect.

The Drafting Process

Step 1

Gather Your Raw Materials (Your Inner Blueprint)

To build your purpose, you first need to gather the raw materials. Use the prompts below to brainstorm. Don’t censor yourself, just write.

- Who am I at my core, beyond my job title?
- How do I aspire to serve or impact others (my Player-Coach, my team, my family, my community)?
- What is the unique legacy I want to leave?
- If my job ended today, what would still drive me to serve?
- What do others say I ignite in them?

My Notes

Step 2

Understand the Framework

Now, we will use a specific framework to structure your purpose statement. This framework connects your core action to its impact across every arena of your life.

The Framework →

I exist to [Core Action/Impact] by [Your Method or Mindset] so that [Result in Others: in Work, in Life, and in Legacy].

Example

Full Statement: I exist to bring order to chaos by leading with calm and clarity, so that others can rise with confidence: as a father who models peace under pressure, in my leadership through complex change, and by leaving behind a legacy of grounded, values-based decision-making.

This purpose in action across life's arenas:

- Family: I teach my children how to face challenges without losing themselves.
- Leadership: I simplify the storm so my team can execute with focus.
- Legacy: I am remembered as the person who brought stability when others panicked.

Step 3

Write Your First Draft

Using your brainstorming notes and the framework above, write the first draft of your purpose statement and its application in your life's arenas.

My Purpose is:

I exist to _____

by _____

so that _____

Family (Your closest relationships):

Leadership (Your team/colleagues):

Legacy (Your long-term impact):

Step 4

Refine and Align

A truly authentic purpose takes time. Be prepared to write 5, 10, or even 25 drafts. Use these prompts to refine your work:

- Review it: Does it align with your core values? Does it feel true to you?
- Keep it Concise: Can you make your main statement even more powerful and clear?
- Read it Aloud: Does it energize you? It should feel like fuel.
- Align with Your Player-Coach: How would sharing this purpose with your Player-Coach help them understand what truly motivates you and where to find opportunities for your growth and development?

Architect Your Vision Statement (Your "Where")

What is a Best-in-Class Vision?

Vision is a vivid destination of where you aspire for your personal and professional leadership to go. It's not just dreaming big; it is defining success on your terms with specificity. A powerful vision not only motivates you to keep moving forward, but it also inspires your team, your family, and others to keep moving ahead when the way is uncertain.

A best-in-class vision statement is:

- Vivid: It creates a clear, detailed picture in your mind.
- Visible: You can see it, feel it, and almost touch it.
- Real: It feels authentic and possible, even if it's a stretch.

Common Misunderstanding of Vision → Athleadership Shift

Most People Think...		Athleaders Know...
"It's a vague future hope."	→	"It's a tangible, measurable destination."
"It's only about work success."	→	"It integrates life, legacy, and performance."
"It's static."	→	"It evolves with clarity and scale."

The Drafting Process

Step 1

Gather Your Raw Materials

Go back to the intention you set in Lesson 1 and use your reflections from Lesson 2 to answer the prompts below. These answers will form the building blocks of your vision.

✎ Fast forward 5 years. What does ultimate success look like for you professionally? (What is your role? What are you known for? What impact are you having?)

- In that same 5-year future, what does success personally look like for you? (Consider your health, relationships, learning, and overall wellbeing.)

- What does it feel like to be in that future? What emotions come up?

- What are people saying about your impact?

- What in your future vision energizes you when current circumstances don’t?

Step 2

Draft Your Vision Statement

Using your answers, draft a statement that captures the essence of your future self. Write it as if it’s already happened.

Example

- In 5 years, I am leading a cross-functional team known for execution under pressure, mentoring rising leaders, and protecting time for family, health, and impact beyond work.
- I’m a trusted voice in strategic transformation, known for helping companies navigate disruption while staying rooted in integrity and people-first leadership.
- In 3 years, I’ve built a platform that develops young athletes into confident leaders: on the field, in the boardroom, and in their communities.

My Vision is:

Alignment in action: Connecting Your “Where”

How does your professional vision align with the known goals of your team and the wider organization? What conversation could you have with your Player-Coach to share this vision and discuss developmental opportunities that would support it?

Bonus Drill: Make it Visible

A vision you can see is one you can achieve. Create a Vision Board (digital or physical) to bring your statement to life with images, quotes, and words that represent your future.

Take it up a level: put your M.V.P. in AI and gain a more vivid picture for where your life can go!

My Notes:

Architect Your Mission Statement (Your "How")

What is a Best-in-Class Mission?

A Mission Statement is designed to define a task or assignment. It's not aspirational; it's directional. It's the daily behavior that makes your purpose real and moves you toward your vision. Your mission shapes your activities, resources, and time, creating alignment in your career. It can and should evolve, but it should always reflect where you are today.

A best-in-class Mission defines:

- Who you are
- How you live
- The skills you bring
- The results you want to achieve

The Drafting Process

Step 1

Understand the Core Components (The Formula)

Your mission statement is built from four key parts that clarify your action and impact.

The Formula →

I will [ACTION] for [AUDIENCE] by [FOCUS AREA] to [RESULT].

Action

How you move (e.g., Build, Coach, Challenge, Protect, Translate, Activate)

Audience

Who you're responsible for (e.g., My team, rising leaders, my industry, my clients)

Focus Area

Your method or superpower (e.g., Simplifying complexity, connecting vision to action, translating data into stories)

Result

The change you drive (e.g., High performance, strategic momentum, a culture of confidence)

Step 2

Review Examples

- "I will build clarity for my team by simplifying complexity to create a culture of confidence, execution, and trust under pressure."
- "I will empower decision-makers by connecting the dots between vision and action to drive strategic momentum through people and performance."
- "I will coach high-potential performers by translating the mindset of elite sport into leadership habits that win in life and business."

My notes

Step 3

Draft Your Mission Statement

Use the formula and examples to architect your mission. First, fill in the blanks, then combine them into a full statement.

ACTION: _____

AUDIENCE: _____

FOCUS AREA: _____

RESULT: _____

My Mission is:

Read it out loud, and change any word that doesn't sound like you.

Alignment in action: Connecting Your "How"

Review your mission. How does this 'how' provide clarity to your team and set clear expectations for the work you will prioritize together?

The System for Momentum: The 90-Day Way

You now have the first draft of your M.V.P. Blueprint. This is your strategic compass and your alignment tool. The 90-Day Way Scorecard is the vehicle that will move you forward.

Your Task:

- [ ] Review your M.V.P. Blueprint drafts (Purpose, Vision, Mission) that you just completed.
- [ ] Open your 90-Day Way Scorecard.
- [ ] Complete Part 1: M.V.P. Foundation. Transfer your drafted Purpose, Vision, and Mission statements into the Scorecard. Also, add the core Values you identified in Lesson 2.

This is a critical step in activating your blueprint. In the next lessons, we will use this foundation to build out your actionable goals within the Scorecard.

You won't rise to the level of your potential. You fall to the strength of your conditioning.

Locker Room Reflection

After drafting your M.V.P. Blueprint, what is the most clarifying insight you've had about your path forward, and how do you think it will positively impact your relationship with your Player-Coach or team?

Quick self-check

Just for you. Your Pulse Check, the one that tracks your season, is in the course.

	Strongly Disagree	Disagree	Neutral	Agree	Strongly Agree
I use or will use my M.V.P. as a decision filter in moments of pressure.	○	○	○	○	○
My current role allows me to live my purpose.	○	○	○	○	○
My M.V.P. draft gives my Player-Coach a clearer picture of my career aspirations.	○	○	○	○	○
I feel more energized because I'm living in alignment with my M.V.P.	○	○	○	○	○

Based upon your answers, how can you leverage your 90-Day Way to make adjustments?

Get feedback

Run your core rep, then ask one person how it landed: your Player-Coach, a peer, someone on your team.
